

Megan Marcus is the CEO and Founder of FuelEd, a non-profit organization with a mission to improve student outcomes by developing the social and emotional competencies of teachers and school leaders, so that they can build stronger relationships in schools. Megan holds a bachelor of arts degree in Psychology from the University of California at Berkeley, a master of Psychology degree from Pepperdine University, and a master of Education, Policy, and Management degree from Harvard University. While at Pepperdine, Megan studied under Dr. Louis Cozolino and served as the lead researcher for his book, The Social Neuroscience of Education. Megan then completed a Master's degree in Education, Policy, and Management from Harvard University, where she explored how to translate the elements of a therapists' professional training to an educational setting. Her research with Dr. Cozolino and studies at Harvard combined to form the core beliefs that became the bedrock of FuelEd. Since 2012, Megan has passionately served the educational community as FuelEd's CEO.